Polyurethane Upholstery

Polyurethane upholstery options from Geiger Textiles provide a robust offering of alternatives to leather for spaces that need to balance elevated aesthetics, cost-effectiveness, and hard-working durability. In addition to high-performance characteristics, each of these polyurethane options offers a distinct appearance—the distressed look of Antico, the natural grain of Granno, the metallic luster of Lucio, the subtle sheen of Novello, and the pebbled texture of Vaquero. Beyond the strength, durability, and stain resistance expected from polyurethanes, these leather alternatives upholster beautifully on seating, lending a soft hand and high level of comfort.

Polyurethane Upholstery

ANTICO

Named for the Italian word for “antique,” Antico has an antiqued, almost distressed appearance, creating a two-toned effect from depth of the grain. Additionally, an ink- and stain-resistant finish blocks dye transfer from indigo denim, putting these eight neutral colorways—ranging from cream to dark shale—into play for high-traffic applications.

GRANNO

Combining high durability with the soft hand and natural look of leather, Granno provides a go-to leather alternative for practically any commercial application. A proprietary ink- and stain-resistant finish gives Granno an invisible barrier of protection against even the toughest stains. Not only will indigo-dyed denim not transfer to Granno’s 15 colorways, but their classic tones will also survive shifts in tastes and trends.

LUCIO

With a subtle luster that calls to mind polished metal and a soft buttery hand, Lucio’s unsurpassed durability seems almost secondary. Far from it, the polycarbonate construction—the strongest of polyurethane resins—gives Lucio durability to match its refined aesthetic. Not only does it achieve 500,000 double rubs and withstand 15-week hydrolysis testing, but it is also inherently ink resistant. Lucio comes in six colorways.

VAQUERO

A pronounced pebble grain lends the look of hand-rubbed leather to the eight colorways of Vaquero. This dimensionality highlights the peaks and valleys of the surface, creating a two-toned effect. A 100-percent polyurethane, Vaquero is not only highly durable, but it also upholsters easily. The well balanced palette of sophisticated neutrals—from the creamy Leche to the dark navy of Sapphire—opens up endless specification possibilities.
